I have spoken with John Mobley, he was not offended or hurt at all. I did apologize though.

During the interview we were allowed to dig and ask questions so I didn't mean to interrupt Ted. and I am sure Ted didn't think that I did.

These people are my community and friends.

If you would like to reprimand me do so at meeting, and not seek me out individually.

Also please talk to your council when proposing yourself a raise, we were all quite blindsided and I in my years on council have never seen the mayor propose their own raise. It was always put forward by a council member.

We as a council would also like to know what is going on with the Lisa Marie email. Regardless where you are you are a publicly elected official, as you are reprimanding me you need to think of this situation.

I am copying and pasting the following from MRSC Site.

Thanks Margie

Council Meetings

Cities face various issues with regard to control of council meetings, including meeting agendas and council deliberations.

Who sets the council meeting agenda and manages the meeting?

The city council has the authority to establish the council meeting agenda (RCW 35A.12.100; RCW 35A.12.120).

Council rules of procedure will often delegate agenda preparation to the mayor, manager, or the city clerk, but the substance of the agenda ultimately is under the control of the council.

Who controls council discussion and deliberation?

During the meeting itself, the mayor is the presiding officer and is responsible for running the meeting (RCW 35A.12.100; RCW 35A.13.030; RCW 35.23.201). Ultimately, though, it is the council's meeting and councilmembers are expected to participate and state their positions. As noted by the U.S. Supreme Court in Bond v. Floyd (1966):

Legislators have an obligation to take positions on controversial political questions so that their constituents can be fully informed by them, and be better able to assess their qualifications for office; also so they may be represented in government debates by the person they have elected to represent them.

Councilmembers have a First Amendment right to share their viewpoints. As stated in Bond, “[t]he manifest function of the First Amendment in a representative government requires that legislators be given the widest latitude to express their views on issues of policy.”

Limits on council discussion can be adopted in local rules of procedure and the presiding officer (i.e., the mayor) is expected to enforce these rules. These limits could include, for example:

- Setting a meeting adjournment time for council meetings, like Puyallup; or
- Giving councilmembers a specified amount of time to speak, like Port Townsend.

What happens if a councilmember's conduct at a public meeting is disruptive?

Local rules of procedure may also lay out a code of conduct for public meetings, which applies equally to the conduct of members of the public and of the governing body.

These same rules often address what happens if a councilmember violates the code, including verbal admonition, written reprimand, censure, or expulsion from the meeting at which the conduct is occurring. (RCW 42.30.050 allows the majority of the members of a governing body to clear the room and adjourn/reconvene a public meeting if it is interrupted in such a way as to render the orderly conduct of the meeting unfeasible.)

It should be noted that the city council as a body must direct a councilmember to leave a meeting, not just the presiding officer (e.g., mayor). Note, too, that this should only be done as a last resort, keeping in mind First Amendment protections for elected officials.

The comment you made to John Mobel was rude and unprofessional.

When Ted was being interviewed you interrupted him and you commented when he was speaking.

In the future I would hope you reframe from insulting The residence about their physical stature . I would hope when people the public are speaking you don't interrupt them.
